- House A: Mediation Shall Be Made as a Mandatory Dispute Resolution Step in Construction Contract
- House B: Party Shall have Their Own Autonomy in Deciding Whether to Mediate Their Dispute or Not

Mediation fosters relationships between parties through amicable settlements and reduces hostile dispute resolution processes. To promote the effective use of mediation in construction disputes, should we mandate mediation in construction contracts? By mandating it, party autonomy might be compromised, which is against the fundamental principle of ADR, and could it then affect a party's willingness to enter into a settlement? Join us in this debate and cast your vote to your favourite House and debaters.
